At a bly meeting, Thursday night there was a 50t of warm talk, at the end of which the factions were very far apart. Two well-known washerwomen carried the meeting by storm by declaring that they were washing now for the children of white folks who had owned them in slavery times, and that they would keep on, the union to the contrary netwithstanding.

When another member suggested that they form an alliance with the Chinese Laindried, and thereby have the whole city at their mercy several ring-leaders, anxious zo strike, threw parliamentary procedure to the winds. They would have picked up flat-irons based any been handly, for the proposition ried the union leaders. They did not want to combine with cheap labor, they said, and added that in the event the baskets were dropped they would warn the Chinamen not to accept work which the negroes had refused to handle. The yellow peril serms to have knocked the stuffing out of the strike movement.

GROUNDS, October 4.—This was Pennsylvania Day on the Jamestown calendar, and hundreds of Pennsylvanians, headed by Governor E. S. Stuart, were here in honor of it. The visiting Governor and his official party of 160 arrived at the Exposition Grounds shortly after 10 o'clock this morning, coming over from Old Point Comfort, wehre they had passed the night. They went direct to the Pennsylvania Building. There were many Virginians and others on the grounds to help the citizens of the Keystone State celebrate, but heavy clouds, which shut out the enticing rays of the sun, kept hundreds of others away.

An elaborate program had been prepared for the day, speeches by eloquent orators, parade of troops and receptions being among the features. The boys of the Ninth Pennsylvania, of Wilkesbarre, commanded by Colonel Asa Miner, formed Governor Stuart's military guard of honor. Escorted by these in imposing pageant from the Pennsylvania Building, the Governor and his party arrived at the Auditorium for the formal exercises at 11:30 o'clock. At the main entrance they were met by Governor Swanson and a party of exposition officials. The Governors of Pennsylvania and Virginia proceeded to the stage arm in arm.

crnors of Pennsylvania and Virginia proceeded to the stage arm in arm.

Speeches Made.

The assembly was called to order by Hon. Henry F. Walton, chairman of the executive committee of the Pennsylvania. Exposition Commission, who introduced Governor Stuart as the presiding officer. Hon. Harry St. George Tucker, president of the exposition, was the first speaker. He was followed by Governor Swanson, who gave the visitors a warm welcome to Virginia. The Governor of Pennsylvania warmly acknowledged the greeting of the Governor of Virginia, and introduced Lieutenant-Governor Robert S. Murphy, of Pennsylvania, the orator of the day. The Lieutenant-Governor proved himself a very engaging speaker.

Luncheon followed the Auditorium exercises, and at 3 o'clock this afternoon Governor Stuart and party reviewed all the military at the exposition, reinforced by the Ninth Pennsylvania, on Lee Parade.

From 4 to 5 this afternoon the Pennsylvania Exposition Commission tendered Governor Stuart a reception at the Pennsylvania Building, and this evening, from 9 to 11, Governor and Ins. Swanson tendered the Keystone the Pennsylvania Building, and this evening, from 9 to 11, Governor and Mrs. Swanson tendered the Keystone Governor a reception at the Virginia Building. There were many distinguished callers, including army and navy officers, as well as those prominent in social and civil life, at both these events.

Mrs. Harry St. George Tucker, a natives of Wilkesbarre, Pa., took an especial interest in Pennsylvania Day, and did much for the entertainment of the official party.
